

When I am in the Hospital with COVID-19

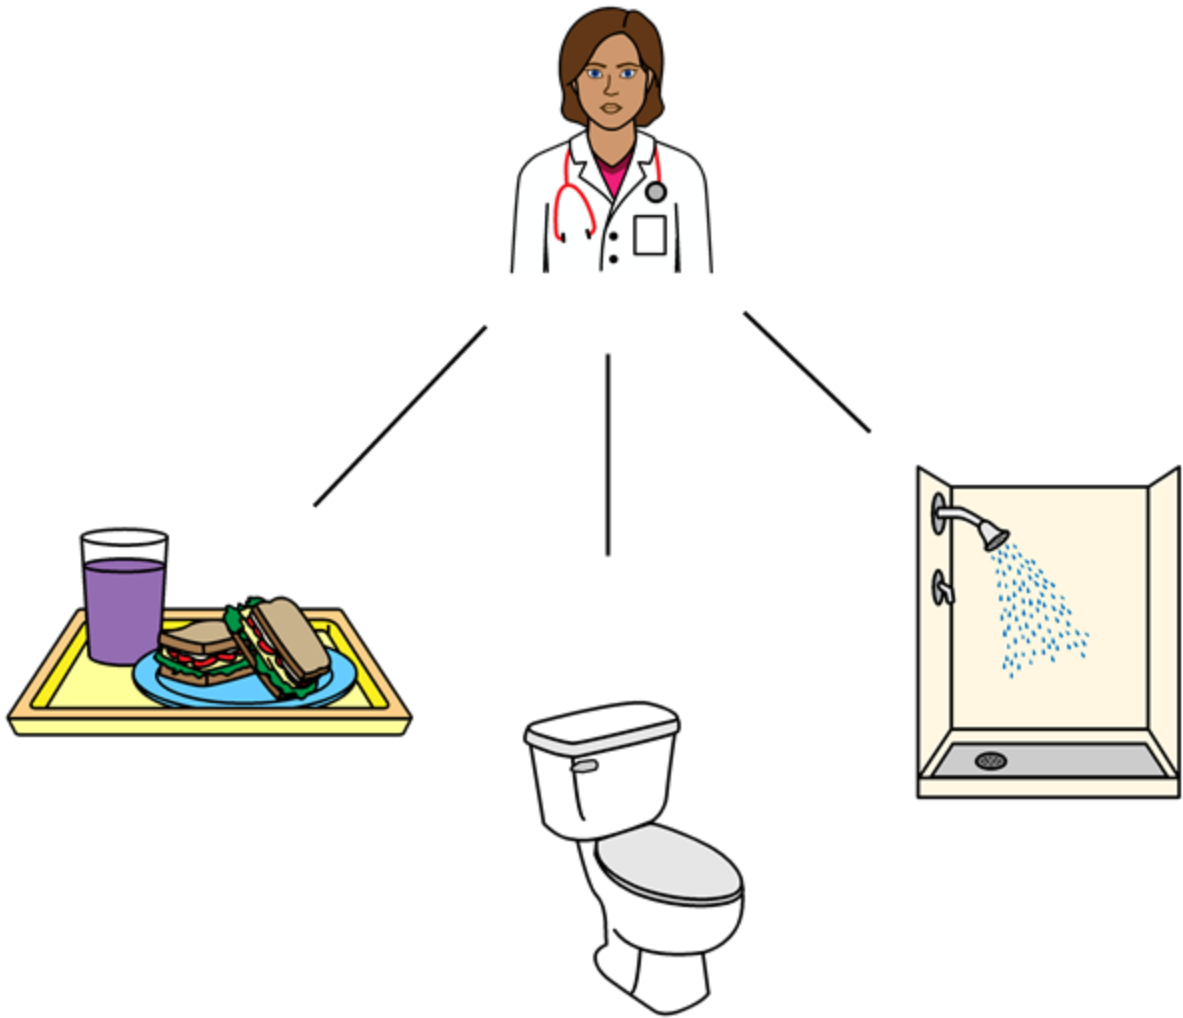

If I have COVID-19, I might be in a room with other sick people, or I might have my own room.

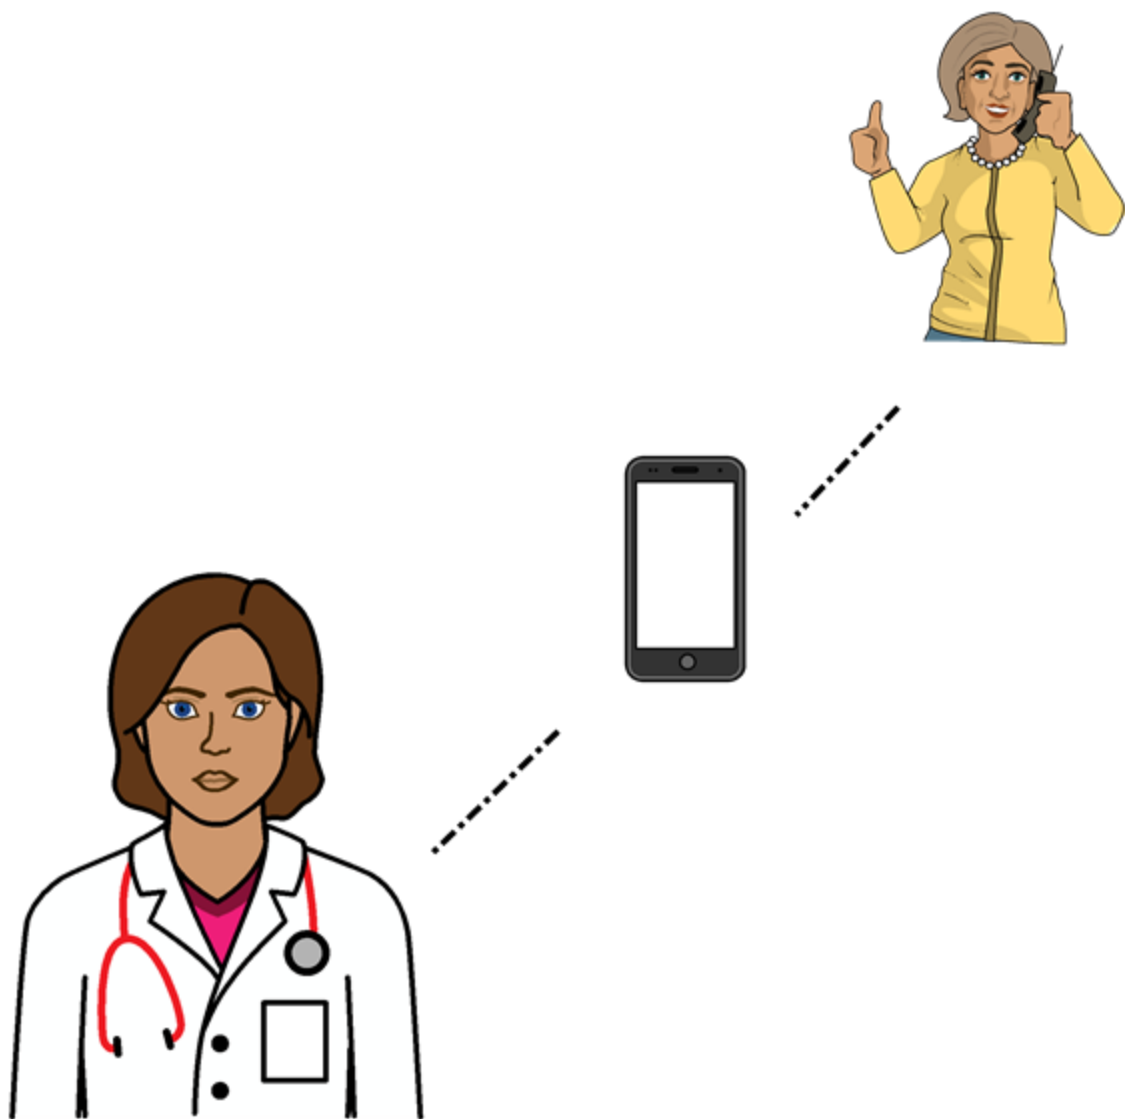

I might not be allowed to have visitors at the hospital. This is so that I don't give the virus to other people.

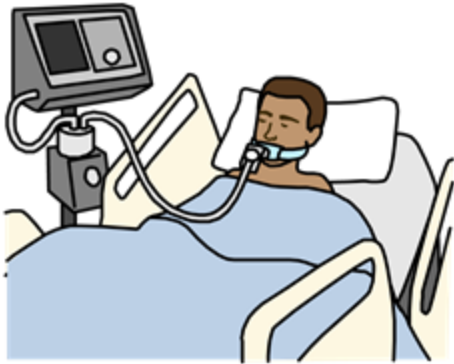

The doctors and nurses at the hospital will give me the right medicines and treatment to make me better.

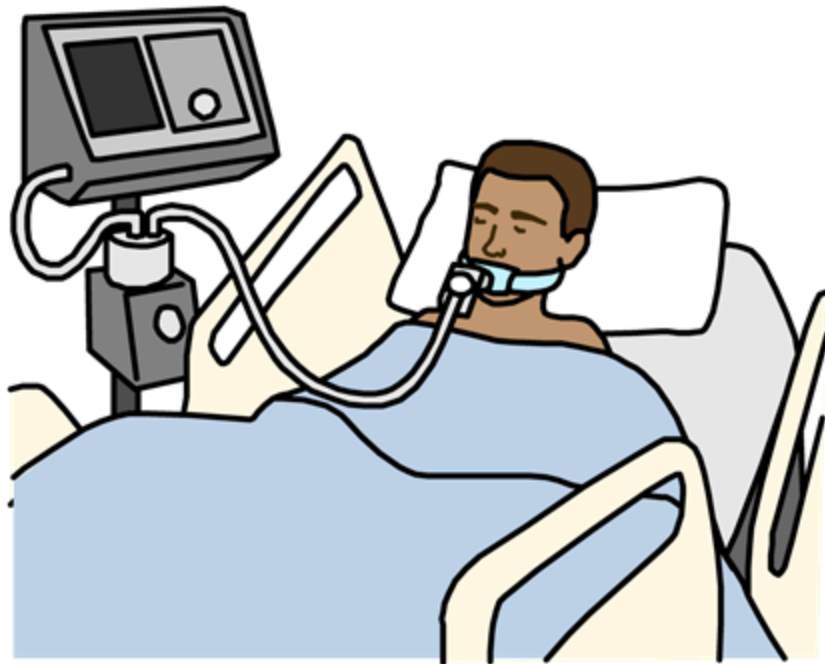

The nurses will also help me eat, go to the bathroom, and take a bath or a shower.

The nurses will call someone I know to tell them how I am doing in the hospital.

If I am having trouble breathing, the doctors and nurses have equipment to help me.

I might need a special machine to help me breathe. This is called a ventilator. I will be asleep when the ventilator is helping me to breathe.

When I start to get better, I will not need a ventilator or an oxygen mask.

When I start to get better, I might want to use the things I brought with me, like my tablet, my music, or my books.

The nurse will help me to call my family and my friends.
Talking to them will make me feel better.

Most people in the hospital with COVID-19 get better and go back home. I will probably get better and go back home.
